Category:Windows security software Category:Windows-only software Category:Cloud services Category:Utilities for WindowsQ: Running a single command on the same machine On this rz repository, there is a line of code that executes a command that I can't decipher: if [[ $ENV_PYTHON_PY_FROM_PYTHON_PROGRAMS -gt 0 ]]; then python-build --python "$ENV_PYTHON_PY_FROM_PYTHON_PROGRAMS" --build-system "ghc-${THIRD_PARTY_DIST}-${PY_TOOLCHAIN}" else The 'python' command is actually python2.7. I can execute this command (or something like this) without error and I'm stumped as to what the meaning of this command is. A: $ENV_PYTHON_PY_FROM_PYTHON_PROGRAMS is a run time flag. Meaning that each instance will get a different value, instead of the same value you used in your shell script But it's a run time flag, so it doesn't make sense to run your command if that value is different. Since it's just a run time flag, you could always have it
